Contracts are about trust, not terms

How can clauses foster collaboration on projects? How can your contract build trust? Discover all this and more in Sarah’s lively and enlightening talk...

You’ll learn how to start a project as you mean to go on; the myths and temptations of writing contracts; and how to avoid the 3 key causes of disputes.

You’ll leave this event knowing:

- ♥ How simple a truly good contract can be
- ♥ Why a watertight contract is not good for business
- ♥ How easy it is to create a disaster waiting to happen
- ♥ Why you need trust before you write a contract

“Great to hear a down-to-earth, simplistic approach to contracts”

Katy Harris,
Project 5

“Sarah is a vibrant and engaging speaker and not at all what you expect from a lawyer”

Peter Knight, Partner,
Knight-Morris

WARNING

This talk will change your view of contracts. You may find they irritate you more! You will start to read and understand the small print! You will say no to contracts which are unfair. You will start to use them as invaluable tools to build trust and collaboration during projects.

These are intended side effects

Sarah Fox is an international speaker and trainer with 20 years' experience in contracts starting as a construction lawyer. She wanted to cut through the confusion and created the 500-word contract to simplify something that was bewilderingly complex, rarely read and totally unfit for purpose.

Yet, as you will learn, contracts are about much more than pages of documentation and signatures...

Will you sign on the dotted line?

"Clarity events are normally of a very high quality but yours was one of the best & most impassioned I've heard"
